

I believe expanding the LPFM service to take priority over current FM translator services would be a great mistake if it prevents listeners from hearing KLOVE (88.9 and 88.5). This is a primary station for my family providing entertainment, news, and data on local meetings and events. If KLOVE were replaced by a different broadcaster using the LPFM our family and many other people I know would have no avenue for contemporary christian music and community service announcements. The service provided by KLOVE is definately in the public interest; they encourage participation in charity events, provide information on local gatherings, concerts, and other events; and generally encourage their listeners to be better people and help improve their community and the world. In fact it's to bad there aren't more stations like KLOVE because if there were maybe we'd have more people helping each other and a lot less violence and other problems.
